Dear Sirs:-

I have had an inquiry from one of my readers regarding the small gold coin which is the basis of currency for the League of Nations. It is reported to be the smallest gold coin now made for circulation.

Would you be good enough to tell me if this coin can be purchased. If so, from what source and how much it would cost?

Appreciating your co-operation, I am

Sincerely yours,

Alfred D. Moore

Dear Sir:

In reply to your favour of March 6th, concerning the small gold coin made to act as the basis of currency for the League of Nations, we read an article with regard to this some months ago. From this article and from subsequent enquiries, we were given to understand that but one of very few pieces were made. It was done more for a record than anything else. We have been hoping that a number of pieces would be struck as souvenirs. Its value in American money is about two cents.

Very truly yours,

Curator
